The dossier mentions an "Alpha Wolf", a feature that was not implemented when the wolf was released in version 216.0, and wasn't implemented until version 258.0. This stands in contrast to the Allosaurus, which had an "Alpha of the Pack" mechanic upon release in version 245.0.

Direwolf - Official ARK: Survival Evolved Wiki

The "alpha wolf" is a stat buff (similar to mate boost) given to your highest level wolf in a pack. That said, the alpha buff is not in the game yet. What I want to know then, is what if ALL your wolves have the same max level, IE you went out and intentionally tamed only the highest level ones like I did and got the same taming efficiency at tame.

The alpha holds his tail and head high, he lifts his leg to urinate while subordinate males usually do not. He is continually vigilant, not simply responding to obvious threats but maintaining a watchful eye at all times. Ultimately, the position of alpha male had nothing to do with age, size, strength or aggression.

The Alpha Male - Living with Wolves

It is common behavior in a wolf pack for the alpha pair to be the only pair to mate. It keeps the numbers in control, for too many wolves in the pack, especially puppies, would be a liability. Many hungry mouths and not enough hunters means they could all suffer.

Alpha Female - Living with Wolves

As you might already know, wolves copulate like dogs, the male mounting the female from behind. During mating, an actual physical tie occurs caused by swelling in the alpha male's penis and constriction in the female's vaginal wall. After about five minutes the male will stops and twists around so the two are end to end.

Wolf Country, reproduction, bonding and mating

Almost always, only the male and female alphas of the pack will mate. Wolf packs typically have one litter of pups per year. Mating typically occurs between January and March. Wolves begin breeding between 2 and 3 years of age and are believed to mate for life.
